Task 2: Planet earth consist of numerous marvels to be explored and nowadays people are more passionate of travelling and to experience uncertainty. There is always a clash of argument, some assert that travelling is a valuable experience while other presume that it is sheer wastage of money and time. In my perspective travelling plays a pivotal and should be done from time to time To begin with, travelling is something from which one can replete every fascination of his/her. Travelling to new places, meet new people and experience different culture has its own charm. People are nowadays travel frequently because of numerous reasons. Firstly, people have the amenities and certain amount of wages to spend on travelling, in the past people were not economically strong and balanced but today every individual has certain amount of penny in their pocket to fulfill all their desires and it is all because of better job opportunities and wages as compared to the past. Secondly, the mentality of people has been changed drastically over the years because of globalisation and the impacts of westernisation, people nowadays want to explore new places with their cronies or kiths and kins and want to cherish life to the fullest. Moreover people get easily bored from the same routines and habits so for a change travelling acts as a boon for human beings. Through travelling one can relish different scrumptious food, meet new people, explore new culture, enjoy new languages and new places which all in all makes a person feel alive Moving further, on the flip side there are some people which condemn the frequent travelling because each trip needs some good money and amenities. As in country like India the day-to-day inflation trouble people a lot and at that point of time money is solely saving factor. People usually find this as wastage of time because one can work at that point of time and saves some money for the future and there is saying "Money Saved Is Money Earned" so one should take of these factors To recapitulate, I would like to say that one must travel and explore not only the native country but also internationally because travelling gives some priceless lifelong memories to behold with in the heart but also the pocket of an individual must not be sacrificed
