

Task 1: Dear An! Can you imagine that who I met last week? Believe me, I have already met Obama president directly. After making his statement in National Convention Center, he came back to his car, in that time, I met him, It can be considered that the first time I met one president. I said: "Hi" with him and then he looked me and smiled. Till now, I felt very happy because he's much friendly and his smile can inspire and motivate me to try harder to gain a good career like him. Maybe that's enough today, I'm looking forward to hearing your response. Your friend Trang

Task 2: In my opinion, I agree a part of this mentioned topic. My reason that communicating by phone calls is very convenient and comfortable, It suits with most of situations, especially by developed technology in telecommunication nowadays. People can talk with each others wherever and whenever they are by phone calls as traditional or through some social networks like facebook, zalo, twister... But we can't talk everything through phone calls. In other side, some of important situations that we need to talk with each other directly. For example, when one businessman want to negotiate or sign contract with his clients, they must meet directly, face to face. Through that, they can understand more each other not only by words, but also by behaviors, attitudes, gestures, emotions, non-verbal language....If they just talk by phone calls, they can't pay attention in lots of things like that. Also, they want to keep those negotiations, statements safe. So, it's not safe if we talk through phone calls because It's probably recorded by someone. So, I can conclude that phone calls is the most convenient way in communication, but not the best way in all of situations. Therefore, we need consider which way is suitable in each of cases to create a good relationship between us, also protect our mystery talk through communication media. It's better If we can do like that.
