

Task 1: Dear, Eric Thank you for making dinner for me. I would like meat. I very like vegetables. I will be home at 6pm. See you again. Task 2: •By bringing people and animals together, zoos educate the public and foster an appreciation of the animals. This exposure and education motivates people to protect the animals. •Zoos save endangered species by bringing them into a safe environment, where they are protected from poachers, habitat loss, starvation and predators. •Many zoos also have breeding programs for endangered species. In the wild, these individuals might have trouble finding mates and breeding. •Reputable zoos are accredited by the Association of Zoos and Aquariums and are held to high standards for the treatment of the animals. According to the AZA, accreditation means, "official recognition and approval of a zoo or aquarium by a group of experts." •A good zoo provides an enriched habitat in which the animals are never bored, are well cared-for, and have plenty of space. •Zoos are a tradition, and a visit to a zoo is a wholesome, family activity. •Seeing an animal in person is a much more personal and more memorable experience than seeing that animal in a nature documentary. •Some would argue that humans have little, if any duty to non-human animals because humans are more important, and if keeping animals in zoos serves any educational or entertainment purposes, we can ethically do it. •Zoos help rehabilitate wildlife and take in exotic pets that people no longer want or are no longer able to care for. •Both accredited and unaccredited animal exhibitors are regulated by the federal Animal Welfare Act, which establishes standards for care.
