

task 1 Hi Paul, I would like to thank you for inviting me to have a date with you. I will visit you by my sister's motobike. I 'll meet you at 9 a.m on the morning saturday. I think we should go to the cinema , after that we will have a small meal together at home. I really like cooking with your mother, she is funny. I'm looking forward to meet you. Yours, Linda task 2 In my opinion, many movies have awful special effects. the first, sound effects no matter what the action is, there's, always, a generic, heard-it-before, in the old days of film the sound effects were made to sound physically real. but today's "sound effects" seem to be more of a backdrop, like music. the second, visual effects. along with the crass " whooshes" and " whumphs" come the "not-one-thing-or-another" swirling, blazing lights that accompany various super hero battles. these variously-coloured lights are pretty standard fare, from one film to another. who knows what they are? they are neither fire nor water, but always swirl unrealistically around heroes,