

Task1 : Hi, Ally I am so happy to tell you about my birthday party which happened five days ago. It is really really great. I wish you could be here that day. The party was held at 8 PM. I invited all members of my class 10A1 including our head teacher, Mrs Thuy- an attractive woman. At the beginning of the party, We were served with cakes, candy and soft drinks, etc. All of them were very delicious, I like it a lot. Then, We sang and danced freely. At the end of the birthday party, We talked about school, study, friends,etc and played game together, made more fun. The atmosphere were very interesting. The party finished at 10 p.m. I were received so many gifts which made me more happier. I think this was a interesting and cozy party.

Linh Task 2: So important is the house that everyone make effort to build their own houses. I certainly consider that you will be happier in a smaller house. First and foremost, it easier to maintain. Anyone who has owned a house knows the amount of time, energy, and effort to maintain. All things being equal, a smaller home requires less of your time, energy and effort to accomplish that task. Secondly but equally importantly, you can spend less time cleaning and less money. Smaller homes are less expensive to keep(insurance, taxes, heating, cooling, electricity, etc. Many of the benefits above(less cleaning, less maintaining, mental freedom) result in the freeing up of our schedule to pursue the things in life that really matter- whatever to want that to be. Thirdly, Living in a smaller house encourages family bonding. A smaller home results in more special interaction among the members of the family. And while this may be the reason some people purchase bigger homes, I think just the opposite should be true. Last but not least, You can spend less time decorating your house. While some people love the idea of choosing color, furniture, window treatments, decorations and light fixtures for dozens of rooms, you don't need. In conclusion, I strongly think you will be happier if you buy smaller house rather than a big house.
