

Task 2 As you're planning out that trip abroad, you may want to bring along a friend or family member for the experience. Unfortunately, not everyone has friends and family that share the same desire to travel abroad as you do or they may simply not be in a position where they are able to do so, don't worry, let 's do it alone. Sure, I wouldn't mind having someone to go along with but the fact is, traveling solo affords you more freedom to do what you want,when you want and for how long you want to do it. There are never any disagreements on where you want to travel to or how long you want to stay. You are always free to decide your complete travel route and itinerary. By traveling solo, you'll likely meet many more people along the way than if you were traveling with a friend. This is mainly due to the fact that you'll be much more apt to make the initiative to meet other travelers and locals along your journey You can volunteer in organizations and also join tour groups with others. And if at anytime things aren't working out, you can always just head in the opposite direction and go your own way.
